

Policy Governing Use of Reproductions For Materials Held in the APA Archives

Materials held in the APA Reference Services Collections are routinely reproduced for private study, scholarship or research use. This use is explicitly allowed by the fair use provision in the Federal Copyright law. Any use other than private research may be subject to copyright restrictions.

Materials which are no longer under copyright protection may be reproduced without restriction because they are in the public domain. We would ask that users provide appropriate reference to us so that their readers can locate the originals, if so desired.

Materials that are still under copyright protection will not be reproduced unless permission is granted by the copyright holder. The user is responsible for obtaining such permission. APA Reference Services Collections will make reasonable efforts to refer researchers to the copyright holder, but is not responsible for finding the holder or verifying the copyright status. Absent evidence to the contrary, all materials will be considered to be under the relevant copyright protection.

Materials for which the copyright is held by the American Psychological Association Archives may be reproduced, and use permission granted subject to the following terms and conditions:

1. A written request must be submitted to the APA Reference Services stating: the item(s) to be used; the intended use of the item(s); the type of publication or broadcast; and the projected date of publication or use.
2. A commercial use fee of $50 will be charged for each commercial use of each reproduction. This fee may be waived, at the discretion of the APA Reference Services staff, for government agencies, non-profit or charitable organizations, academic presses, historical societies and professional organizations.
3. Any and all charges incurred by the APA Reference Services in supplying the materials to the user shall be borne by the user according to the appropriate fee schedules and prices. Special fees may include express shipping, dismounting, remounting, matting, and oversize original photocopy charges.
4. Proper and full credit must be given. Each reproduction (except when used in a video/film program) shall bear the credit line: Courtesy of the American Psychological Association Archives. When provided, photographer or collection names must also be included in the credit line. Each item must be credited individually, preferably near the image. (For film/video programs, a general credit line at the end is adequate.)
5. The reproduction will be used in its entirety, unless identified as a detail. Superimposing upon the image, cropping or bleeding off the page is prohibited without specific permission to do so.
6. If feasible, one complimentary copy of each publication in which the reproduction appears shall be provided to the APA Library & Archives at the time of publication.

(Unless otherwise specified by APA Reference Services at the time of the request, images provided for film/video programs only require proper crediting of images used.)

7. Permission to use a reproduction is granted for one-time use only for the sole purpose specified in the request. Any subsequent or different use (e.g. reprints, second edition, special editions) must be applied for in writing and may be subject to additional use fees.

8. Distribution or resale of reproductions supplied by APA Reference Services is strictly prohibited.

9. In authorizing the publication or use of a reproduction, the American Psychological Association surrenders neither its own rights to publish, nor its right to grant permission to others to publish from its collections.
