

Resources for Psychological Practice With Older Adults and Their Caregivers

The APA Office on Aging developed this list of resources to supplement the recently updated APA Guidelines for Psychological Practice With Older Adults and in response to the Institute of Medicine report The Mental Health and Substance Use Workforce for Older Adults: In Whose Hands, which noted a dire need for health providers of all disciplines to meet the mental and behavioral health needs of older adults.

All psychologists, even those who do not currently specialize in or work with older adults, may find these resources useful.

People 65 and older are the fastest growing segment of the U.S. population, and the demand for psychologists with expertise in older adult care will expand as the older population grows. This demand is expected to rise as the “baby boomer” cohort—who are more accepting of mental health services—moves into old age. Also, as clients age, their needs may change, and additional issues specific to mid- and late life may emerge. Even if you do not work directly with older adults, related issues may arise when working with your own clients (e.g., those caring for aging parents).
