Evidence

For each of the eight principles, please provide at least one piece of evidence that demonstrates specifically how these principles have been enacted at a school-wide level (i.e., not just in a few classrooms). Please do not exceed 2 pieces of evidence per principle. We also encourage you to submit a plan for continued and enhanced integration of these principles into your school community and culture. On the summary table below, please indicate what document(s) you are using as sources of evidence to illustrate the principle and the specific pages where we can find the evidence. Evidence might include the following (this is not an exhaustive list -- these are examples of sources of evidence!):

- Changes in school policy on promoting student thinking and learning, and a one page follow up on how data were used as a basis for making those changes
- School improvement plans with a one-page description of resulting changes from their implementation
- A brief summary of results from teacher or student surveys and how these findings were used to promote student thinking and learning
- Agendas for professional development or professional learning opportunities and a one one-page description of resulting changes that evolved from those experiences
- Rubrics for how teachers are evaluated, and how this rubric is used to elicit professional development or interventions related to promoting student thinking and learning
- External recognition of your school's application of these eight principles
