

Memorandum of Understanding between the American Psychological Association and the Jordanian Psychological Association

The American Psychological Association (APA) and the Jordanian Psychological Association (JPA) agree as follows:

Whereas, the Charter of APA and the ByLaws of JPA share mutual objectives calling for the advancement of psychology as a science and a profession and in the public interest; and

Whereas, it is desirable to have integration and exchange between the psychological societies in Jordan and the United States; and

Whereas, mutual concerns make it a certainty that occasions for joint consultation and cooperation will present themselves in the years to come; and

Whereas, both organizations wish to anticipate such occasions by establishing a framework for their timely discussion;

Now therefore, both organizations reaffirm their working relations in this memorandum of understanding.

Pursuant to this understanding, the executives of APA and JPA shall maintain regular communication to discuss matters of common concern. APA and JPA will seek to identify specific projects and activities in which they may work together, assist or support one another, or otherwise cooperate for the betterment of psychology and the public interest.
