

Memorandum of Understanding between the American Psychological Association and the Consejo General de la Psicología [Spanish Psychological Association]

The American Psychological Association (APA) and the Spanish Psychological Association (COP) agree as follows:

Whereas, the Bylaws of APA and the Statutes of COP share mutual objectives calling for the advancement of the discipline in the public interest; and

Whereas, it is desirable to have integration and exchange between the psychological organizations in the United States and Spain; and

Whereas, mutual concerns make it likely that occasions for joint consultation and cooperation will present themselves in the years to come; and

Whereas, both organizations wish to anticipate such occasions by establishing a framework, when possible, for their timely discussion;

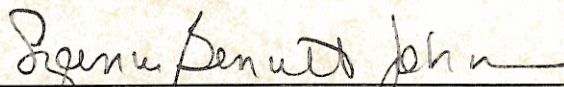

Now therefore, APA and COP affirm and reaffirm their working relations in this Memorandum of Understanding.

Furthermore, pursuant to this Memorandum of Understanding, the executives of APA and COP shall maintain regular communication to discuss matters of common concern.

Finally, APA and COP will seek to identify projects and activities in which they may work together, assist or support one another, or otherwise cooperate for the betterment of psychology and the public interest.

This Memorandum of Understanding consists of two (2) equivalent documents, one in English, one a certified Spanish translation.
