

Collage Construction (Michele Wittig, from Jonathan Zeledon)

This has worked well with high school students.

Small groups of 4 students each are formed. Each group is asked to make a collage using the materials they are given. Half the groups are given generous materials: colored paper, scissors, colored pens, and stickers. The other groups are given only a brown paper bag. Groups can communicate. It has been observed that some ask to use materials from groups with greater resources; some of those with more resources offer to share with other less affluent groups.

After about 15 minutes, there is a debriefing and discussion session.