Note. This summary is compiled from the 2014 annual reports of the Council of Editors and from Central Office records. Corresponding figures for 2013 can be found in the July/August 2013 issue of American Psychologist. Numbers are rounded off to the nearest whole number. Jnl. = Journal; JEP = Journal of Experimental Psychology.

^a Includes manuscripts for which final editorial decisions had not been made as of December 31, 2014. By the date of this report, decisions will have been reached on most of these manuscripts. ^b The rejection rate indicates the percentage of submitted manuscripts not accepted for publication in a journal. For example, a rejection rate of 76% means that manuscripts submitted to a journal have a 24% chance of acceptance. The average rejection rate for all journals is calculated by dividing total acceptances by total submissions (with pending manuscripts factored out) and subtracting from 100%. It is not an average of the individual journal rejection rates. ^c Includes articles, brief reports, case reports, discussions, monographs, and brief substantive items. ^d "Average Lag in Months" is calculated using the acceptance and publication dates for all manuscripts published in 2014. As available, this lag is reported for manuscripts published first online then in print. ^e Data for the editors and incoming editors were combined in order to reflect activity for the journals as a whole. ^f Includes award addresses, correction notices, editorials, obituaries, and instructions.

Correction to Summary Report of Journal Operations, 2014

In the report “Summary Report of Journal Operations, 2014,” (American Psychologist, 2015, Vol. 70, No. 5, pp. 455–456. <http://dx.doi.org/10.1037/a0039280>), on p. 455 the columns displaying average publication lag time for online first and print articles were reversed. In addition, the reported number of accepted manuscripts for the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology should be 118, not 65, and the rejection rate should be 86% rather than 91%.

The online version of this report has been corrected.
